

Most memorable meals

In many respects, 2009 was a tough year, and Atlanta's restaurant scene had its fair share of hard times, but it also had a number of new, interesting and delicious restaurants worth a look back.

Miller Union (not rated)

999 Brady Ave., Atlanta, 678-733-6550, www.millerunion.com

This Westside newcomer from former Sotto Sotto manager Neal McCarthy and former Watershed sous chef Steven Satterfield has a menu that bursts with seasonal flavors, and Satterfield has an eye and palate for seasonally fresh ingredients, while McCarthy warms the dining room with his British charm. Look for my review next week; until then, run, don't walk, to sip some of Satterfield's mustard greens soup – a velvety concoction of house-made chicken stock, greens, garlic and onions all thickened with potatoes, not cream. A dinner out with girlfriends had us laughing and sharing – auld lang syne-style – the farmhouse egg over celery cream and toast and Sape-lo Island clams while sipping chilled pinot blanc.

[editorial]

[The Reynolds Group Inc.] [www.thereynoldsgroupinc.com]