8 Under-the-Radar Lunch Deals in Atlanta

Lunchtime provides a great opportunity to dine at some of the city's top restaurants without busting your budget. Many restaurants also use lunchtime to experiment with menu items and play with more casual classics like sandwiches and salads. You'll also find plenty of daytime-only menu items, special packaged deals and other incentives. Dig in to these dishes for a midday meal that satisfies — and then, yes, come back for dinner.

This temple to Southern-sourced ingredients continues to impress on all fronts, but its lunchtime menu is worth attention. Steven Satterfield is an integral part of the city's food scene, just as his restaurant's food should be an integral part of anyone on the Westside's lunch rotation.

The Deal: We could tell you about the great sandwiches on Miller Union's lunch menu that aren't on its dinner menu, but let's save that for another time and instead wrap this up with the Miller Union ice cream sandwich. The different flavors change depending on ingredients' availability, but one thing's constant — they're only on the restaurant's lunch menu, providing a great midday treat.
